2. The purpose and task of studying the discipline "Foreign language (English)"

2.1. The purpose of studying the discipline

The working program was developed taking into account the international practice of language education in universities, the "All-European Recommendations on language education" (ZER, 2001) regarding the levels of language proficiency and the main provisions of the "English language program for professional communication" by the team of authors: G.E. Bakaeva, O.A. Borysenko, I.I. Zuyenok and others. (recommended by the Ministry of Education and Science of Ukraine, Letter of the Ministry of Education and Science of Ukraine No. 14/18.2-481 dated March 2, 2005).

Based on the fact that the level of language proficiency B2 (independent user) is the standard for a bachelor's degree, the work program and thematic plan of the discipline "Foreign (English) language" are focused on thorough preparation of students to achieve the B2 level. 7. Independent work explanatory note

With the limitation of study classroom time, as well as taking into account the mandatory condition of the intensive nature of exercises for mastering a foreign language, there is a need to teach students to work independently outside classroom time. Independent and individual work of students is an important component of effective training of specialists of any educational and qualification level and any specialty. Since the interests of students are concentrated around their future profession, the content and character of independent extracurricular work is consistent with the most profound and significant motives of their activity, related to the profiling specialty.

A set of stable leading motives that orient students to creative work and express their desire to self-improve, to grow professionally in their chosen field, make it possible to understand the existence of a close relationship between a foreign language and the future profession, thanks to which, with the help of a foreign language, they have the opportunity to multiply and deepen their knowledge in the specialty. Therefore, independent work in the discipline "Foreign (English) language" is carried out in two forms, which require significant time and effort:

- reading for professional and academic needs;

- writing for professional activities and academic needs.

In addition, students can be offered participation in the club of English language experts, participation in seminars, round table meetings, meetings of the scientific student society, conferences, and Olympiads.

for independent study by students and their individual work. They are to be studied in the recommended sequence after careful study of the material provided for classroom work. The basis for familiarization is the literary sources given in the list. If there are unclear questions, students are recommended to consult the teacher in order to obtain the necessary clarifications regarding the organization of independent work and a possible expansion of the list of literary sources.

Individual work is intended for more in-depth study of the most important issues of the course. They are additionally processed by students who are individually interested in the course. The teacher provides appropriate additional individual consultations that expand the professional outlook.
